Cobalt Poets Series # 609 ~ February 27, 2024

bio

i stand at the edge of the forest and wait for all of the language to breathe itself quiet / the leaves flutter and cool air settles into the places cut by water / the crickets speak by running a wing along the teeth of another wing / i don't have a body just a voice / i won't answer you i will only reply to the teeth of the night

Scott Ferry

Scott Ferry helps our Veterans heal as a RN in the Seattle area. His ninth book Fill Me with Birds, co-authored with Daniel McGinn, is now available through Meat For Tea Press. His book of prose poetry, Sapphires on the Graves is upcoming from Glass Lyre Press in Summer 2024. For Scott, poetry is a strange compulsion, like cleaning one’s teeth with a coelacanth spine. More of his work can be found @ ferrypoetry.com.