

To my Butt White Goth Vampire Dream Girl

There she is...my fantasy woman
Beautiful, curvy mysterious and oh so white
The paleness of her skin so blinding
You need sunglasses to protect your cornea
And, oh, that fashion sense
Look how that black mesh blouse matches
Her black shirt, which matches her black boots which match her black pantyhose which match her black lipstick which match her black hair
It's always hard to color coordinate Especially when you use no color at all
It serves it's purpose and brings out that wonderful Pigmentation of yours...none
As the strains of Siouxsie cry out
Setting the mood up...the mood of love
Wait, was that you checking me out
I thought our eyes met
But maybe it's just the glint off your glasses
It's dark in here...open to interpretation
Why am I so attracted to the fairer, paler sex
When most guys are looking for the babes on Baywatch,
And I am on my own personal Gothwatch
For the woman so morbid,
She would actually dare to put a wicca spell
Just to get me
And freak out my parents
And lay beside me post-ecstasy
With the candles aglow-our black wardrobe
Strewn accross the floor
Creepy moans on the radio
We embrace the embrace we both need
And just for a moment our collective depression lifts
And we both smile
Oh well...
That's why they call them fantasies

MARK WHITE

Mark White is a multi-talented performer, known as "The Extreme Being" who has graced stages nationwide performing comedy, poetry and spoken word. He has opened for the biggest names in comedy, including performers as diverse as Steven Wright, Jerry Seinfeld and Andrew "Dice" Clay. He has also opened for several musicians including part-time poetess Jewel and ska legends Sublime. He has performed his one-man shows "I Have 17,652 Female Friends...I Don't Need Anymore!!!" and "Wigga Please!" to enthusiastic crowds in theaters. He has also performed poetry in venues in LA, San Diego, New York and Las Vegas, without so much as one line that rhymes another. Whether performing comedy or prose, he breaks all the rules and proudly touches on topics others do not.

