Sweet Soliloquy

And when I die,
may the wolves & coyotes
cry-out my name
in sweet soliloquy;
from the cliffs
of the mountains;
howling haiku
at the purple moon
where purple flowers
bloom
in your 3rd eye,
I will exist
eternally
in the womb
of
your subconscious.
Raising hell,
raising questions,
raising your
consciousness
to a higher
vibration;
for in times
of revolution
sleep is never
an option.
It is time
for you
to awaken.

Prince A. McNally

Prince A. McNally is a widely published poet out of Brooklyn N.Y. whose work focuses primarily on the human condition. A recipient of a Poets & Writers grant, he has also received several Best of The Net nominations. Prince's debut collection of poems is due to be released in early 2022.

Cobalt Poets Series # 481 ~ May 25, 2021 ~ PoetrySuperHighway.com/cobalt