Untitled

Catherine Daly

Lit swimming pools behind locked fences in the rain at night, screens' small squares holding water, a car, sun roof open, drink holders full water flows and drips through gutters, hits patio floors,

plashes ferns, grass, fronds gentle, insisting on falling suffusing already-heavy, fecund, erosion what does time tell how do we see the sadness of history why, why, ways

Catherine Daly is a newly-minted Member of Brooklyn Community Board 11. In Los Angeles, she organized readings for UCLA Hammer Museum, PEN West Fellows, as well as for local and national literary conferences. Author of eight books and myriad chapbooks published online and off, including at https://www.youtube.com/@cabdaly

Cobalt Poets Series # 579 ~ July 25, 2023