PAINTING

GOD'S

heavenly brush strokes you are a master piece painted by the LORD your outfits are a frame that add pizzaz and décor to those gorgeous curves fragrance lingers inside my doors the kind I'd never smelled before scent of a galactic queen such a beautiful color, i see her a flower
flor
to view and smell, bring close, adore blend with ease
I push my lips between her leaves and ignore her thorns

JAVIER COVARRUBIAS

Javier Covarrubias is a Southern California native. Born and raised in the Atwater Village area of Los Angeles, he has been writing poetry for about twenty years. "My pluma describes my environment. I write about what surrounds me, from landmarks, to destinations, style, fashion, sceneries, everyday folk, who I have had the honor to rub elbows with, be it a famous actor or convicted killer. I'm intrigued by the city's extra curricular activities its automotive trends, its on going street warfare and its illegal underground art culture. Like a journalist reporting it all in poems, I think of myself as a lover…I love life love my family love God, and His beautiful paintings "women." I love to write, love my circle. Find me at my home away from home S.A. studios Los Angeles. -Javier Covarrubias
