The mountain of justice is a structure we have yet to summit. I am a fault line beneath a super volcano waiting to erupt. You can only add heat to rock for so long before it becomes lava. America ain't got enough “yellow stones” to buy its freedom. Buy back its innocence. Even Mt Everest collects the bodies of those who dare conquer it. And we have been collecting bodies for centuries. Our pedigree is a mass grave turned mountain range with politicians trying to hide who's at fault; like us poets wont make this whole thing crumble into the sea, then walk on the water above it.
