CHRISTOPHER BOGART

Christopher Bogart is a retired educator and a working poet and writer with a BS in Liberal Arts from St. Peter's College/University, and an MA and MFA in Creative Writing from Monmouth University. He is the author of several books including 14: Antología del Sonoran, published in October of 2018 by The Poetry Box and nominated for a Pushcart Prize for his poem, "Abraham Morales Hernandez." and a book of poetry about the war in Ukraine, соняшники/Sunflowers was released in February of 2024. It is illustrated with the artwork of Ukrainian artist, Beata Kurkul. The proceeds benefit White Stork, an organization that provides IFAKs (Individual First Aid Kits) to Ukrainian soldiers. He is presently working on a recorded reading of his book, This Conversation, with 12 other poets, that will be available at no cost to schools, churches, and universities as an aid to a comprehensive conversation about race. He is also working on his first novel, tentatively titled The Beast, about the plight of two Central American teenage migrants who flee poverty and crime in search of a better life in America.
