WE LIVED HAPPILY DURING THE RAIDS

After Ilya Kaminsky

And when they raided people's workplaces, we protested

But not loud enough, we opposed them but not loud enough. I was on my phone, America tracking everything about me and my communities, tracked house by tracked house by tracked house,

I went outside at night and there were no stars.

On the Gemini month
of a fascist regime, in the house of immigrants, in the street of immigrants, in the city of immigrants, in the country of immigrants,

our great country of immigrants, we (forgive us)

lived happily during the raids.

Cobalt Poets Series # 724 ~ September 15, 2026

Moncho Alvarado

Moncho "Momo" Alvarado, a transgender poet, holds an MFA from Sarah Lawrence College. They are the author of Greyhound Americans (Saturnalia Books, 2022). Alvarado lives in Los Angeles on the land of the Tongva, Tataviam, Serrano, Kizh, and Chumash Peoples.